

Racism Postcolonialism Europe (Postcolonialism Across the Disciplines LUP)

Graham Huggan, Ian Law

A twisted religion, a potent demonology,

Huggins and Law hold racism as a religious concept. Note that Christians filled great numbers of volumes with deep and lengthy analyses of the Devil. Satan. Lucifer. They wrote volumes on devil possession and exorcism. Except.... the devil doesn't exist.

This thing called white racism has the same characteristics. It is supposedly latent within the breast of every white man. However, most of us give no evidence of it, and such evidence as exists invariably has more prosaic explanations. Racism is something imagined.

White fear, distrust and dislike of minorities, though we have been taught to suppress every manifestation, is sometimes overt. It is not nearly so frequent as is, say, Muslim crimes like the beheading of Lee Rigby or Black hatred for whites as demonstrated by riots and looting in Baltimore, Charlotte, Chicago, Ferguson...which these modern high priests are quick to explain is not, cannot be racism.

But, if diversity is your religion, multiculturalism is your mantra, believe what you will. Please just don't involve me. I live in a world of reality.
